1. In April 1950 a Czechoslovakian refugee living in Sweden was called to the Swedish Alien Commission and told that his Swedish citizenship papers, which he had been waiting for 10 years, would not be forthcoming at this time. The Commission further stated that due consideration may be given at a later date provided he "keeps his hands clean."
2. When the Czechoslovakian asked the Commission what the meaning was he was informed that he associated with too many foreigners, he had worked for the British Legation at one time during the war, he had never taken the Swedish authorities into his confidence, and he had been doctor to employees of the Czechoslovakian and Hungarian Legations.
